

IN HOMAGE TO

RASMUS ANDERSON

FOUNDER OF THE NORROENA SOCIETY

Even though The Norroena Society was originally a fictional organization invented by Rasmus Anderson to promote the Norroena Library he had collected, it is in honor of his vision that we continue its name. His goal was to educate people on the culture, history and religion of ancient Northern Europe with a collection of some of the best works on the subject. As an actual society, we aim to continue this legacy by developing various projects that will hopefully shed new light on our sacred heritage.

Eventually we hope to reprint and publish all of the original 16 volumes of The Norroena Library, while at the same time expanding the collection with new works we feel are important for the study of early Teutonic culture and traditions. Since we will be building the society from the ground up, there are many exciting possibilities for the future!

It may take us years to realize the many plans we have for The Norroena Society. As we continue to grow, building this organization a piece at a time, we will never lose sight of our beginnings. With this we pay tribute to the founder of our society, Rasmus Anderson.
