Theme Park License Plates

There have been two types of theme park souvenir license plates. Disneyland U.S.A. had a series of six bicycle size in the 1960s. This article, however, features the commemorative license plates sold at Disney theme parks since the early 1970s.

There was a 1971 Walt Disney World pre-opening plate sold at the Preview Center. The companion feature on "America on Parade" was the first truly souvenir plate during 1975-76. Disneyland has followed with a new plate each year since 1985 and many special-event plates have been issued in conjunction with new gates, hotels, and attraction openings. License plates in recent years carry a disclaimer regarding their illegality as a replacement for regular license plates. This is obvious to most readers, but California provides great flexibility regarding temporary plates which are usually just an ad for the dealer from whom the car was purchased. Enough people preferred advertising Disney and made the switch to require the use of the disclaimer. Regular-size auto license plates have been issued since 1976 at Disney theme parks. Disneyland has issued an annual plate since 1985.
