

Godzilla Reborn (Part III)

Jason rubbed the tears from his face and cleared his throat before walking down the hall to the elevator. The ride down was slow, the words he had just heard kept repeating in his head, the last words from his now dead grandfather.

“Jason, it’s up to you now to release Omega, this is my last request.”

What should I do he thought. Releasing another creation with the intent of killing Godzilla for what reason? It was his grandfathers dream not his own, but he did owe a lot to him. He felt he needed to do this for his grandfather. The elevator doors opened and he stepped out.

“Oh good evening Jason, I’m very sorry I heard the news.” Said a man who was waiting for the elevator. Jason nodded as the man passed and the doors closed, he wasn’t sure exactly who the man was or what he did here but it didn’t matter anymore. Everyone knew that this last project, project Omega was the last hope. If it failed there was no more money, no more jobs, if it succeeded who knows what potentially could happen? He walked down the hall passed several doors that he didn’t even think about, at the end was the door he wanted, it led to a room that gave a wonderful view of Omega.

He punched in the code and the door slid open. Walking in he glanced out through the bulletproof glass to see everyone clearing out of the area; it was only an hour till launch. It wasn’t as if it never had been activated before, it had, and even had several test runs on the very island of the first projects failure. Thinking of that made him wonder, if those spider creations of his grandfather and the other various scientists and workers here had killed Godzilla where would he and they all be now?

Sitting down in a soft leather chair he slid up to the desk and entered the password to get passed the screensaver. He had been listening to his grandfathers voice recordings but had left in a hurry when he heard that his condition had worsened, that was last night, over fourteen hours ago. He was tired and getting hungry but he wanted to finish the last two recordings before he launched Omega. The last was recorded the day before they released BioGodzilla. His grandfather had become bedridden just a few days after that. He played the second to last file; it was mostly praise for the Omega like the rest with some info about what had changed. The last file however was different.

“Jason, I made this for you as I know this will be my last days. BioGodzilla is being released tomorrow and I am to say the least ecstatic about it. I have my doubt although very little and I do hope that it succeeds with all my heart. I feel as if it fails, I will die much like it. Omega though is my life’s work, I couldn’t let you know about it for reasons I even know can’t tell you but it is of little important and of no consequence if you do not know. I build most of it before those spiders but I didn’t want to send it out against Godzilla until I had seen what he was capable first hand, hence the first project. The second was more of a whim and I decided to go with that instead as I didn’t think it would be possible to do such a thing, to clone Godzilla.”

There was a pause before Jason heard his grandfather coughing. He couldn’t help but wonder what the reasons were for him not being informed.

“I might still even be alive at this point and if I am please don’t ask me about why I never told you. If I have passed before I could tell you then here it is. I want you to activate and launch Omega. I know you don’t have the bloodlust to see Godzilla dead as I and many here do but you must put that aside for me.”

Jason nodded.

“I will leave you with his Jason, I loved my son, your father, and I love you just as much. Don’t place yourself underneath him, he may have never said that he loved you but he did, he told me so. Goodbye Jason I wish you and the project the best of luck.”

Jason felt the tears coming again but he held them back. He stood and left the room he still had time to eat before the launch and he needed to occupy his mind. The food had no taste; well he didn’t taste it as he chewed mindless. This day was different then the other launch days. It really could go either way again but this time there wouldn’t another chance, a forth try, just game over. Jason watched the elevator doors close and let the hum pull him deeper into the daydream he had been in since starting lunch.

“I can’t do this, I’m not my grandfather, nor am I my father, its our own fault that Godzilla is here. The world created him the world must pay then.”

“What about the innocent? What about those who never had anything to do with it, those that were born after it had happened. Are they to die as well?”

The ding from the elevator snapped him back to reality as the doors slid open. He walked slowly taking with each step another view on what he was about to do, whether it was right or wrong. He stopped and punched the code, then stepped into the room, ten minutes till launch. The plan was simple they would lure Godzilla to the very same island with a failed beta version of one of the spider bots using a mixture of chemicals to make sure Godzilla gave chase. It was strange really, he was never made away of such things until recently. The chemicals were unknown to him only that it was make Godzilla urge to follow or something to that extent.

The phone rang; Jason picked it up, “Hello?”

“Sir, Godzilla’s ETA is less then fifteen minutes I think it would be best if you launched Omega early.”

“Thanks for notifying me, I will,” he hung up the phone and froze; it was time.

From this room he could control most of the operations but he only had half of what was needed to launch Omega, it was for security reasons only. He entered the three passwords that gave clearance then he activated his part. He could hear the power being shut down and Omega’s own core starting; it was booting and filling the power cells with energy. Jason wasn’t sure exactly how Omega was powered, he did have it explained to him but he still was baffled how it was executed and how they managed to get it to work.

Below and opposite of Jason an alert popped up telling the operator that the first half of the launch had been activated. The operator looked at the time first before entering the passwords and activating the second half. The second half made Omega aware, in other words it booted his AI and let him run through the scans to make sure everything was ready. Omega had more then five dozens repair units scattered around his body in strategic locations for internal repairs. They could do simple repairs that might be needed during the fight; any major damage couldn’t be fixed in field.

Omega ran thought the tests before checking the notifications left by programmers as to what was going to be done. There was only one, it simple said, Godzilla. Omega scanned his database in less then one second and came back with the definition for that word. He became aware and began loading all the necessary programs to prepare. It should have only taken thirty seconds from boot for Omega to launch himself; it had been forty.

Omega was never given enough intelligence to become self aware but from what he could gather during the previous tests and the small program he installed on the main system, he knew more then they knew he did. He knew about Godzilla, what he had to do, why, and where, but he also knew about the other failed projects, he was scanning through everything in the databases.

Jason began to think that maybe there was an error, but suddenly an orange light in the center of Omega's head lit up signaling that was ready to launch. Omega didn't have eyes but he did have external scanners, infrared, motion sensors, cameras, thermal detection, and other ways of knowing where everything was around him. The huge platform that was on began to raise and the ceiling above him opened. Not wanting to waste anymore time Omega launched himself via the rockets under his feet. The force was powerful enough to get him airborne but not for very long. Once he had cleared the oilrig he tilted and active the other boosters and sped off toward the island. Inside Jason was worried, Omega wasn't to launch until he had cleared in innards of the rig. The damage from his internal launch was only to the platform but that was the least of his worries.

Godzilla followed the urge that lured him, he wanted to destroy it to stop it but the sensation was a good one, strange how he couldn't bring himself to attack it, he would follow it a little longer.

Jason had his theories as to what Omega really was, they had all said Omega was one hundred percent machine but Jason doubted that. He wondered if perhaps Omega had some biological parts under that armor, he had seen Omega move and he could hardly believe that a machine could move like that, that fast. The weapons as well were deadly and even horrific to Jason. Omega has retractable blades on his knees and elbows, large sword like extensions in his forearms that could eject toward his palm even into something in his grip. Omega can even use its own power core to send a powerful current through its entire body even though any of the bladed weapons.

Godzilla could see that the darkness of the ocean began to brighten, the surface wasn't far and the chemical mixture was almost depleted. Omega located the island in the distance; he was closing in so he dropped to fifty feet above the water causing large waves to form in his wake. Omega wondered what how Godzilla would fight, he had been feed lots of information about his tactics, past battles, data about his height, weight, speed, attacks, everything. To Omega though, it all meant nothing. His scanners had incredible range; he detected Godzilla approaching the island and slightly alerted his course.

Jason was sitting comfortably in his chair watching on six large LCD's different feeds, one was on the mech luring Godzilla, another a high view of the island, another one of the camera's on Omega. Two had data streaming across them one of Omega's the other of Godzilla's but that was blank at the moment, it would rely on Omega for its data.

Godzilla became bored with the mech and broke to the surface early seeing a familiar island nearby. Omega dropped from flight and gravity hurled him toward the island. Godzilla caught notice of Omega as he dropped into view, being curious and also sensing a threat Godzilla headed for the island.

"That went better then I thought." Jason said as he saw Godzilla's info appear on the screen. The phone rang but he reached over and unplugged the line. This battle meant more to him then just the possible end of Godzilla.

Omega landed much softer than would be expected of something of that size and weight. He scanned Godzilla and confirmed the data; Omega ignored the automatic data that the programmers had installed to alert Omega about Godzilla. He was his own, they may have made him but they made him to fight on his own he wasn't about to take advice from them now; this fight was his fight.

Godzilla had reached the beach but had stopped to study this odd creature. It was standing immobile, Godzilla was unsure what to make of it; he grunted and roared. Omega noted Godzilla's roar as that of a powerful beast, he admired the monster that had endured so much. Rushing forward catching Godzilla off guard Omega connected with a right punch that knocked Godzilla down. With a splash of sand and water Godzilla crashed down, Omega jumped back anticipating a counter.

Godzilla didn't expect an attack that fast or that strong, getting back to his feet he charged Omega. Omega judged that Godzilla was only testing the limits of his enemy before he would really start attacking so Omega would give him false limits. Godzilla slammed into Omega moving him but not knocking him down. Omega thrust its knee upward smashing into Godzilla. Godzilla grunted but Omega released the blades embedded within. Godzilla felt the blades tear into him, he jerked back ripping free as Omega stepped back the blades disappearing back into its body. Omega scanned the wounds and found that they had already stopped bleeding.

Godzilla unleashed a wave of energy that blasted Omega on his left side sending him twisting to the ground. Not about to let this enemy recover Godzilla quickly moved to Omega and crushed down with his weight on Omega's arm. The damage wasn't even remotely bad but that crushing blow did weaken the structures of the arm. Omega spun over pulling its arm free grabbing Godzilla's leg. Godzilla began charging another attack but Omega grabbed his neck and lifted him.

Omega was given the right weight and his abilities were adjusted well, Godzilla wasn't hard to boost at all, keeping him there was the hard part. To avoid any damage that might be done by dropping Godzilla, Omega leaned forward and threw Godzilla. Surprised that the enemy could lift him so easily Godzilla flinched for a second but his energy never stopped building, mid-flight he loosed it. The force connected with Omega's chest and pushed him back. Godzilla's blast kept him moving but with gravity pulling him down changing the angle Omega broke free.

"Odd, it seems Godzilla's blast has some sort of magnetic effect, once Omega is hit by it, it's nearly impossible for him to get away." Jason tilted his head and wondered how that might affect the outcome.

Godzilla was getting back to his feet again as Omega launched himself into the air, it was capable of jumping twice its own height. Omega landed but Godzilla was on him before he could even unbend his knees. Godzilla found that his claws weren't very effective against Omega's shell. Omega tried to reach out for Godzilla's neck but he was already ducking and spinning. Godzilla's tail collided with Omega's arm, the very same that he had crushed before, the integrity was slowly failing, Omega slanted with the hit but kept its balance. As Godzilla came around Omega grabbed his neck and ejected the blade within its forearm into his neck. Godzilla felt the blood pour down his throat, he tried to grunt but he only gurgled. Omega sent current through its body into the blade, the electricity entered Godzilla's body adding to the pain in his throat. Omega's grip was tight Godzilla couldn't pull away.

“Could it really end like this? It seems too easy?” Jason was holding his breath.

Godzilla’s spines began to glow, the power gathering. Omega increased the flow of electricity to its maximum, Godzilla jerked his head but the pain only worsened. Godzilla felt the energy moving up toward his mouth, he didn’t hold back. The power of Godzilla’s energy tore through the hole in his neck, like water it entered the small opening where the blade had been ejected. Omega released his grip as damage was done internally. Godzilla’s neck was worse now, his own energy gashing the hole larger. Omega gave the command for the repair units to move to the arm and fix any internal damage they could.

Blood covered Godzilla’s chest, the wound in his neck was healing but it was still a large wound. Omega didn’t want to counter; Godzilla was proving to be more improvising than expected.

Jason’s attention was brought away from the battle when one of the monitors changed to a view of the ocean.

“I don’t believe it.”

Godzilla felt a spark within him, it was familiar but he didn’t know what it was from. Godzilla lifted his head and roared, his neck now healed. Omega crouched and dove forward into Godzilla. He knocked him over and landed on top of him, not wanting to let the monster get any chance for a counter Omega unsheathed the blades on his elbows. Godzilla tried to get Omega off of him but the combined weight and the way he was holding him down proved very hard. Omega raised both arms and slammed them down into Godzilla’s chest, the blades cleaving into him. Godzilla tried to knock Omega off of him again but the blades were taking his attention and focus.

A powerful blast hit Omega causing him to pull his blades from Godzilla’s chest; suddenly another struck him and threw him off of Godzilla. A familiar roar sounded, and Godzilla knew why he had felt that spark. BioGodzilla roared again then approached. Godzilla slid over and moved upright to face himself. Omega scanned this newcomer and identified him as BioGodzilla the second failure.

“This is going to be interesting.” Jason leaned back resting his head on his hand.

Omega let loose all of the blades and charged the two monsters. Godzilla’s internal wounds hadn’t fully healed but his skin had, BioGodzilla leaned forward lowering his head. Omega struck BioGodzilla first slicing him across the neck and face as he spun wildly. Godzilla tried to use his body to stop Omega but the blades opened him on his arms, chest, neck and sides. Omega continued his outrageous spinning; both Godzilla’s growing more annoyed.

Godzilla spun hard swinging his tail high clipping Omega stopping his assault long enough for BioGodzilla to slam into him. Omega started to lose his balance falling back, improvising, he kicked out with both legs and caught BioGodzilla hard in the side launching both of them opposite each other. Omega used the force to roll mid-air and land on his feet.

Godzilla was ready and directed a blast toward Omega; it was met with crossed arms deflecting most of the attack. BioGodzilla got back up and grunted with frustration, Godzilla felt it as well and roared aloud. BioGodzilla moved up parallel to Godzilla, they both looked at each other a moment before their spines started to glow. Omega knew the attacks were coming so he lunged himself forward in an attempt to stop them before they could blast him.

Omega was almost to them when they both opened their mouths and the power was poured forth. The combined blasts met him with a force that he couldn't have possibly blocked or deflected; the power sent him flying back at the mercy of the attack.

"This doesn't look good for Omega. I wonder how he will handle things after this?" Jason furrowed his brow.

Omega finally fell free of the energy as it ceased he impacted the ground ungracefully. Both Godzilla and BioGodzilla didn't waste a second; they were heading for him a mere second after their attack had ended. Omega could feel the seismic vibrations caused by the two charging Godzilla. Before he could even get himself upright, they bashed into him at full speed, Omega was once again at the mercy of the attack. Structural damage to his chest was starting to become a danger, more than a half-dozen of the repair bots had been damaged in some way to make them useless.

Omega got up again faster this time before either Godzilla could reach him. Running forward to meet them he jumped and put his right leg forward connecting with BioGodzilla. BioGodzilla felt the pain explode in his chest and the full weight of Omega crashed into him, he rammed backward straight into the ground. Omega landed on one knee before the back of his head was bashed by Godzilla's tail. Falling forward Omega reached out and caught himself before hitting the ground but Godzilla kicked him and rolled him over.

BioGodzilla grunted getting back up the pain in his chest fading, turning he saw Godzilla raising a leg to stomp on Omega's chest. Omega grabbed the foot with both hands holding it up. BioGodzilla hurried over raising his own leg, Omega removed one hand to grab the other foot trying to crush him but the force behind the two was becoming overwhelming. Omega stabbed both Godzilla's feet with the blades in his forearm then quickly sent a strong current through them.

Godzilla felt the pain but he only pushed down harder as did BioGodzilla. Omega had little choice left, he charged one large current and at the exact second he started to push the crushing legs away from his body he released the shock. The combination of the sudden movement and the wave of powerful electricity caused them both to miss Omega. Taking the opportunity Omega got up as fast as he could and jumped back away from the two Godzilla.

Godzilla spun showing his teeth clearly frustrated, BioGodzilla was slowly to turn, he roared in irritation. Omega knew he would have a better chance facing only one opponent, but which one could he take out the fastest. Omega had a trick up his sleeve, he had a secondary "mode" if you will where he could increase the flow from his power core and lessen all his joints in affect making him more agile and faster, the only down side would be that any damage could be severely worse in that state.

"What is it doing?" Jason stood watching Omega's stats.

It was a risk that it was willing to take for it knew little of risks and the consequences that they might entail. Godzilla could feel an increase in the energy coming from Omega, BioGodzilla took a few steps forward then looked back at Godzilla. Omega did a quick scan to find that he had suffered the worst damage to his chest and left arm. With all the blades fully extended he stormed forward toward the closet, BioGodzilla. BioGodzilla turned back from looking at Godzilla just as Omega's right blade tore into his eye. BioGodzilla roared in pain and reared back pulling the blade free but two more had already entered his body via Omega's left knee.

Godzilla sprang forward to help BioGodzilla but Omega had already stabbed him in the neck, upper chest and arm. Omega pushed BioGodzilla aside as Godzilla came forth. Omega kicked out but Godzilla moved passing it crashing into Omega, using his legs to keep upright Omega managed not to fall. The two traded blows, Omega slicing where he could, Godzilla streaking his claws across Omega's armor but having little affect. BioGodzilla rushing from the side using his side and shoulder collided into Omega knocking him away from Godzilla.

BioGodzilla was still bleeding and one eye was still shut, Omega went into a roll to prevent any damage. Godzilla's spines started to glow, BioGodzilla shortly followed, Omega remained motionless. He had to avoid it; another hit like that could breach his armor, or even damage a joint to the point of uselessness. Godzilla's eyes studied Omega, he was watching for any twitch any movement, this was a machine though; he didn't give any sign of his choice until he executed it. Adjusted his footing Godzilla grunted to BioGodzilla who did the same.

"Amazing, I think they are communicating, this is absolutely amazing." Jason was ecstatic.

"I never thought that Godzilla had any communications skills, but perhaps he doesn't perhaps they can communicate telepathically? Oh this is just too much, I wish I could study them."

Omega was ready; he could dodge to either side just as they started the attack. Godzilla was the first to release his energy; BioGodzilla waited another second before his burst forth from his mouth. Omega jumped to the right as he calculated that was the best was based on the trajectory of Godzilla's attack. BioGodzilla however adjusted and his attack met with Omega; Godzilla followed now powers converged on Omega.

"Unbelievable, Godzilla must have somehow told BioGodzilla to adjust his feet so that they could move their attack without compromising their support. That is just unbelievable, it couldn't have been that complex." Jason shook his head then turned to the desk and started to take notes.

Omega was hit hard but he was able to spin and the damage was spread over his left arm and back. When the attack stopped Omega's left arm was all but destroyed, it was intact as a whole but the joint was damaged and had lost most of its motion as well as the weight (lifting) capacity. Godzilla and BioGodzilla both roared the sound was something to behold.

Omega was starting to become reckless, he may have been AI but he had learned much on this day. Grabbing his left arm with his right he sent the command to separate his left arm. The shoulder hissed and split as the connections were severed and the joint was dislocated. The arm fell free, the shoulder hissed again and closed, a shield came over the opening closing the hole.

"What does Omega think he's doing? That was meant only for repairs and if the arm was entirely useless." Jason wasn't happy about this turn of events but he was curious how Omega was coming to these conclusions.

Omega held the arm and swung it a few times before him; in his calculations he concluded that it should prove to be a powerful blunt weapon. Omega raised his right arm up and back as he moved forward toward Godzilla who was closet. Swinging fast and hard Omega bludgeoned Godzilla on the side of his head splitting his hide open and knocking him almost to the ground.

Godzilla jerked and the world spun, his eyes shut but he couldn't stop the feeling that the world was spinning. Omega ran passed heading for BioGodzilla bringing the arm to his left, his right arm across his chest. BioGodzilla was ready though, he turned and raised left arm to soften the blow. The attack even softened still caused BioGodzilla pain and left him open for attack. Omega being so close to BioGodzilla smashed his head downward. BioGodzilla saw a flash as his head burst with pain, when he opened his eyes they were blurred with blood.

As Omega raised the dented arm to bring crashing down on BioGodzilla he was hit from behind. Godzilla nearly jumped into Omega sending him down into and onto BioGodzilla sharp jagged spinal fins. More then a few managed to pierce his thick armor compromising his defense. BioGodzilla pushed up with his legs with all his strength and flipped Omega over behind him. Omega rolled over and quickly regained his footing, ducking in time to dodge BioGodzilla's tail.

Godzilla moved beside tackling Omega but not taking him down, Omega struggled with Godzilla but was at a great disadvantage having only one arm. Releasing the blades in his knee's Omega let Godzilla force him backward using the force to bring the blades up into Godzilla's torso. Godzilla felt the metal slip deep into him tearing his innards, but he kept moving forward. Omega pulled his right left free and placed it behind him for stability.

BioGodzilla's fins began to glow; Godzilla could feel the energy behind him. Omega still held his detached arm in his grip. Ripping the blade free Omega simultaneously moved his left and right leg placing them on Godzilla and pushing backward launching himself away. BioGodzilla unleashed his attack as soon as he saw Omega break away from Godzilla but Omega dropped and moved so that he was between them. BioGodzilla tried to adjust his aim but he would have hit Godzilla in doing so, he ceased his assault.

Godzilla grunted he was tired of this fight; BioGodzilla shook his body in anger and roared. Omega suddenly had a percentage change and new plan formed; just as BioGodzilla lowered his head from his roar Omega jumped sideways pitching his arm. The arm soared and struck BioGodzilla just as he had calculated, using the slight diversion, Omega quickly got back up and leaped forward in front of Godzilla.

Godzilla had turned his head slightly to watch the arm pass, as he turned back he saw Omega raise his hand palm open. The blade ejected and Omega jammed it forward with all the power he could manage in his arm at that second.

Jason jumped at the sound; he had never heard such a loud cracking noise in his life he jumped in his chair.

"Oh my god..." he mouthed without even a whisper.

BioGodzilla heard the noise as well; it hit him even deeper within his mind in the back of his head. Omega's blade mechanism had broken in more then one place and his wrist joint was severely damaged but he had accomplished what he set out to do.

Godzilla's mouth hung open, he hadn't moved since the blade tore into his head cracking his skull and piercing his brain. Omega twisted his arm trying to break the blade but it came free when he pulled his arm back. Godzilla remained motionless, his eyes were open then he started to lean forward. BioGodzilla rushed forward but Godzilla was already falling to the ground, he landed lifelessly.

“I don’t believe it, I just can’t” Jason put a hand over his mouth; no matter how hard he tried he couldn’t close it. He could only image the celebration going on below where everyone was watching.

BioGodzilla stopped when Godzilla hit the ground, looking up to Omega; he let out a growl that turned into a roar that was deep and filled with anger. Omega had accomplished his goal, his scanners weren’t functioning correctly but his reading for Godzilla showed failing life signs.

BioGodzilla moved forward as if to fall but when his legs finally moved he burst forward faster then ever before. Omega rolled passed the wild charge and ran forward grabbing his removed arm; he turned to face BioGodzilla ready to set free his power. Omega had only one chance and every other way he tried to analyze it, he just couldn’t avoid the attack. Changing the flow of his core again he increased the flow of power, the output at that level was dangerous but he desperately needed to avoid any attacks that BioGodzilla threw at him.

BioGodzilla opened his mouth and the atomic energy surged forth. Omega rolled to avoid the torrent of energy but when he adjusted Omega had to run. Omega kept just ahead of the stream of energy that was nearly upon him. BioGodzilla struggled to keep the energy flowing but he had to stop, as soon as he did Omega rushed him. BioGodzilla was slightly unfocused after the prolonged attack that he couldn’t duck the blow from Omega.

“If we had never cloned Godzilla, I wonder if that would truly have been the end of it all.” Jason’s eyes moved from the monitors to his hands, which were clasped before him.

BioGodzilla was dealt another blow the second only adding clouds to his thoughts and vision. Omega raised his knee fast into BioGodzilla pulling it back and thrusting it forward again and again. BioGodzilla snapped inside, the pain in his body was distant; he felt life in Godzilla, life that was fading. Omega dug the blade of his right elbow into BioGodzilla’s lower neck and tore it across as hard as he could. BioGodzilla roared, it was mixture of pain and anger. Before Omega’s blade could exit his flesh BioGodzilla reached deep within him and released his power.

A force from within BioGodzilla blasted omega backward, his roar continued as the power erupted all around him. The wounds to his torso and lower neck remained open and bleeding, his power was being diverted. Omega stood his armor was intact but his entire external defense against any energy attacks was entirely depleted. BioGodzilla’s spines were glowing brighter then ever before, the heat coming from him was intense.

“Is...is BioGodzilla going into a meltdown?!” Jason stood and approached the monitors he felt horror at the thought of what that might bring.

Omega charged BioGodzilla again smashing him again with the arm; BioGodzilla absorbed the hit spinning with it bringing his tail around to impact Omega. Omega bent at his waist joint as the tail rammed and pushed him back and away. BioGodzilla came full circle and saw Omega land before he turned to face Godzilla still lying still.

He moved as fast as he could to his side, the energy within him fleeing his body as if it was afraid to remain. He could feel the force within him weaken but he knew that it needed to be done. Godzilla’s brain was repairing but it was slow and his power was diminishing.

His heart still beat, slowly, rhythmically, each of his cells using all of its power to heal. His brain was complex and not as simple to repair as skin or muscle, but help was coming. Unexpectedly a force entered his body, it was warm and so very familiar. Each and every cell absorbed it, there was an abundant amount and each and every bit was taken in. His brain even though it was severely damaged knew what this energy was and where it was from.

BioGodzilla could feel Godzilla's life returning, he could feel his heartbeat increase and the spark in his mind return. He felt weak and tired and he wanted to sleep, BioGodzilla always had the feeling he was the weaker of the two but now that didn't matter as they were now one.

Godzilla's eyes snapped open in time to see BioGodzilla's close as he fell to the ground. Godzilla rose, looking down at BioGodzilla. He couldn't feel him, he was gone, raising his head he roared, it was an amazing roar it had an echo within it that made it double. Godzilla felt within him a part of BioGodzilla, he would live on within in, their energy now combined.

Omega's readings for Godzilla were off the scales, readings showed odd numbers that just didn't add up. Godzilla looked down at BioGodzilla again then turned to face Omega who was already charging. The separated arm swung through the air and sped toward Godzilla, it collision shattered the arm. It was as if it were a twig, Godzilla grunt and head-butted Omega. Omega's head dented and he fell backward.

"So then, it is true, Godzilla is immortal and can't be killed." Jason walked back to his seat never taking his eyes away from Godzilla.

Omega unsteadily got to his feet preparing to attack Godzilla with his blades. Godzilla spun throwing him with his tail. Omega's armor was failing it wouldn't take much more. Omega increased the flow of power from his core; it was now producing over triple its normal capacity. Omega knew that it couldn't hold out at that level for long but he only needed enough time to get to Godzilla to detonate it.

Godzilla watched as Omega ran toward him, his fins began to glow. Godzilla held it waiting for Omega to get closer; when he was just upon Godzilla he jumped hoping to avoid the blast. Godzilla didn't move his head until Omega was just over him. Omega forced as much power out of his core as possible to cause a self-detonation. Just as the power ripped through the core, Godzilla raised his head and unleashed the power within.

Jason saw that Omega was going to explode, Godzilla's energy tore through Omega's chest like it was foil just as the core exploded. The explosion blocked Jason's view but he quickly changed to another aerial camera. He saw a huge cloud of dust and bursting from within a long blue beam reaching high into the sky. Slowly it faded but the dust and debris remained. Jason was certain that the blast must have tore into Godzilla and killed him, that the blast was just his energy being released or some sort of spasm.

Jason rubbed his face, he swallowed, this was it, either way this was it.

From within the dark cloud of dust and debris a roar bellowed. Godzilla strode out, the dust streaking off him as he moved. Godzilla turned back and let out a soft roar, it was a cry for BioGodzilla. Turning he moved toward the beach and slipped back under the waves. Jason watched and waited for the cloud to dissipate, he saw a crater and pieces of Omega were scattered about. He saw BioGodzilla still lying where he had fallen.

"Just because man creates it, does not mean man can destroy it. Godzilla will live forever as a reminder of that. I'm sorry grandfather, I'm sorry." Jason's face was marked with tears, he hadn't failed his grandfather, he did release Omega but he felt as if Omega had been his grandfather incarnate. He wiped the tears from his face and realized that he had been sitting there for quite some time. He started to turn off the monitors when he realized that something was off.

Deep under the ocean waves Godzilla entered a large chasm he called home, back on the island however, BioGodzilla was nowhere to be seen.