

Nat King Cole (1919-1965)

He was one of the most famous African-American singers of the 40s and 50s. His melodious voice and sophisticated style also captivated Cubans in a very special way. Tropicana, Havana's most popular cabaret, was the stage where his songs reached such great success that they are still remembered today. Among them, one of the most famous is "Perhaps..."

PERHAPS, PERHAPS, PERHAPS

Lyrics by Osvaldo Farrés

*Always when I ask you
When, how and where
You always tell me

*And so the days go by
And I, losing hope
And you, you replying

*You are wasting time
Thinking, thinking
Of who you love the most
Til when, til when*

*And so the days go by
And I, losing hope
And you, you replying
