

hillbomber skate ma<sup>g</sup>zine

all the news thats fit to shred

issue 1

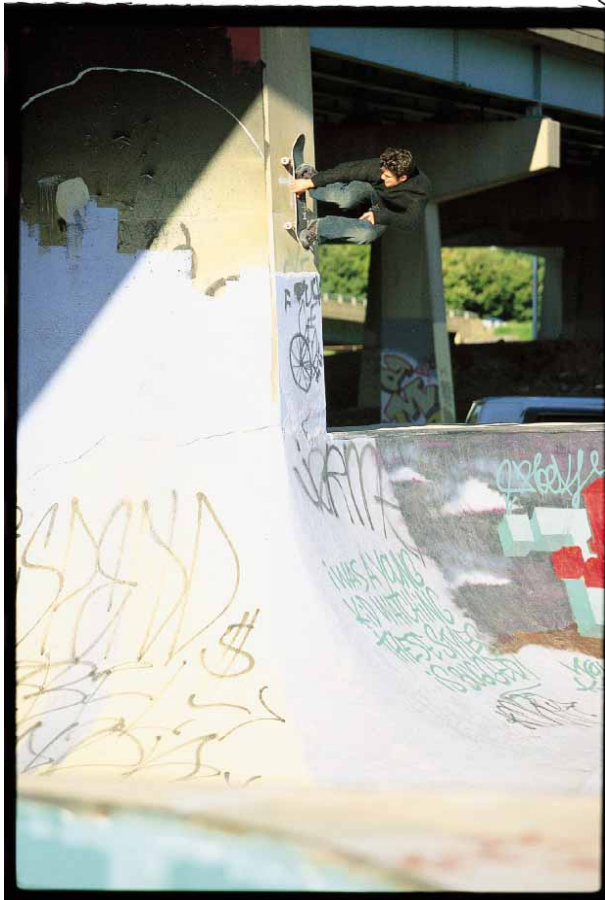

rommets	1
PRÖfiles	2
park Report	2-3
product review	3
arti-cle	3
who made this ma <sup>g</sup> azine	4

rommets: Peter F.

Peter is one of the craziest skateboarders I know. He will do a sick trick with sick style and just be like, "yeah, cool." He always has a good attitude towards skating, and always commits 100%. Watch out, he's going to turn pro pretty soon.

Age: 12                                      Born: San Francisco, CA
Resides: Larkspur, CA                      Stance: Goofy
Sponsors: Parents, Self, Other Relatives

Favorite Saying: "uncool!"

Bam Margera, Wallride Fakie. Photo: TWS

Turn the page sideways and look closely. Peter, ollie.

PROfiles :

Bob Burnquist is my favorite pro because he has invented many cool tricks, his style is really cool, and he inspires me to do vert skating- Peter Felton

Hometown: Rio De Janeiro, Brazil      Resides: Vista, CA

Sponsors: éS, The Firm, Fury Trucks, Ricta Wheels, Hurley Clothing, Nixon Watches, Oakley Sunglasses, Reflex Bearings

Bob, switch indy nosebone something or other at the Vans Triple Crown. Photo: sk8shop.com

Park report: San Ramon, California

I first came across this park because it is in the same town my piano teacher lives. Every Saturday after my piano lesson, I skate here. I learned how to kickturn here. I learned how to F/S ollie here. And, I did my first funbox grind here.

Now for the specifics. There's a bowl with a shallow end and a deep end. There are hips between the ends, and a spine that connects the shallow end to the rest of the park. The transitions in the shallow end are pretty messed up, and there's no coping in part of the shallow end, but it is still fun.

There is a vert quarter pipe, a few flat bars (no round), and a funbox. There is also a weirdly placed manual pad, a three stair with a kinked rail (what's the point?), and a six stair with two ledges and a rail. There can be some problems, but it's an overall good time.

Here is two flat bars, the funbox, the manual pad, and the bowl in the background. The long flat bars can be fun just to slappy on, but if you want a challenge you can try to 5-0 it or something. Photo: Lewis

park report continued

Here's a look at the bowl and one of the flat bars. If you're wondering, helmets are required but the rules aren't really enforced. Photo: Lewis

little arti-cles:

helmet law

The state of California has passed a new law requiring all skateboarders under 18 to wear a helmet when skateboarding on public streets. Watch out.

skatepark closes

A big vert skatepark in Sacramento, CA, recently closed. The park contained huge vert ramps, and was a stop on the first Tony Hawk Gigantic Skatepark Tour. I have skated at this park, and let me tell you, it was a lot of fun. A whoooole lot. Kevin (the owner and old Santa Cruz rider) would sometimes come out and session his fine park. He would do killer ollie fakies on slalom boards! I am almost sure every hardcore Sacto skater (except maybe Brandon Biebel, he is purely street) is mourning the loss of this great park.

little arti-cles continued

Here is a view of the park from the back of all the vert ramps. See? Crazy. I hate to see this park go. Photo: Skateparklist

product review: es menikmati DVD

Skaters: Arto Saari, Ronnie Creager, Rodrigo TX, Tom Penny, Rick McCrank, Bob Burnquist, Eric Koston, and a random policeman.

Spots: Mostly Europe. There's some California in Bob's and Ronnie's parts, and some Thailand in Eric's, but yeah mostly Europe.

Features: Amazing Skateboarding and some playing around at the end. Special DVD features include two tours, a Paul Rodriguez part, young Tom Penny, and Koston trying a native sport of his.

Notes: This was the first skateboarding DVD I got, and let me tell you the DVDness really pays off. Special Features, Subtitles (you will need them), chapters, yeah. It's cool.

Yep, there it is.

Photo: Amazon.com

who made this maāazine:

Writer: Tobias B, unless otherwise noted

Editor: Tobias B.

Exclusive Magazine Photographers: Lewis B., Tobias B.