

Apparently, the Shoals is such a pleasant place to live that even death can't keep some types away.

The area's rich history also includes some rich legends of some well-known haunts. You can investigate and decide for yourself whether they are true, if you dare.

The Ritz Theater, Sheffield

They call him "Randolph of the Ritz."

The ghost stays busy at the beautifully restored building in downtown Sheffield, where many plays and other events take place.

Theater workers have reported sightings of the man in the pinstriped suit and encounters of him changing lighting and performing other mischief, just to make sure they know he's there. He also has been spotted from the darkened distance, only to be gone when someone closes in to take a closer look.
