

The Commandments of Room 221

Thou shall not curse or swear. Others overhear what you say and do! Therefore, offensive language and inappropriate gestures are never acceptable.

Thou shall not lay a hand on any of my personal or classroom materials. This includes the panic button, my podium, desk, or any technology equipment.

Thou shall not graffiti the desk in which you sit or the Word of God which you read.

Thou shall not be late to class, for those who are tardy will have their average deducted.

Thou shall not change your seat assignment without permission, for if you do so, you will be marked as absent.

Thou shall not gossip or pass insignificant notes at any time in the classroom.

Thou shall not exit this room without specific permission.

Thou shall not be rude and shout out openly, for this a classroom and not a zoo. Raise your hand to speak.

Thou shall not use the restroom in the middle of class without permission. Visit before or after class but please not during class.

Thou shall not be disorganized and careless, so please bring all materials to class as assigned and do not ask to leave and go to your locker for notebooks, folders, texts, etc.

Thou shall not be truant (absent without permission).

Thou shall not cheat on any project or assignment for any reason at any time.

Thou shall not be immodest in one's posture and dress because we reflect a Christian atmosphere. Blessed are those who understand that makeup (including lip gloss) belongs outside my classroom.

Thou shall not be a slob. My classroom will be neat, clean, and presentable. Debris is deposited in the trash can and is not left on or near the desk in which you sit.

Thou shall not use or make visible to others a cell phone at any time.

Thou shall not eat, drink, or chew gum without permission.
